Supply and Delivery of Meals to be served for the Child Health Program: Operation Tuli of the City Health Office for 2025 in the City of San Fernando, Pampanga

I. BACKGROUND

According to the World Health Organization (WHO), the reason for the near-universal prevalence of male circumcision in the Philippines is less clear but is long-standing and thought to be unrelated to religious influence. There are few data on age at circumcision, but one study found that 42% of boys were circumcised aged under 10 years, 52% aged 10–14 years, and 5% aged 15–18 years. Epidemiological studies have shown circumcised men have a lower risk of several reproductive tract infections than uncircumcised men.

Conducting male circumcision activities, when approached with sensitivity to cultural, religious, and individual preferences, and ensuring informed consent, can have substantial health benefits and support public health goals.
